Teaching Philosophy

I am an educator who believes that when working in music you must focus on the individual because the art that comes out is from an individual. I believe that all musicians and storytellers need to have the individual educated and nourished before they can truly deliver the gifts that they have to the audience and to be able to work with others. I strive to create an environment that students are growing as artists but more importantly as genuine and caring people first so that they can deliver honesty in music and storytelling. I aid students in discovering their artistic and technical voice.
